"Khoikhoi-Son-of-Man" by Dikobe

I thought I was soul and skin
Pedigree muntu
Until yesterday I heard the truth
Grandfather was Khoisan.

A slave of a trekboer
Fleeing from the Cape laws
Freeing slaves.

At night
He was tied to an oxwagon wheel
Groaning
Day by day leading sixteen span
Fleeing from the Cape.

Night by night
Somewhere there was a cock-crow
A barking dog
A smell of damp fluel
Then he realised that beyond that ridge
Could be a village
Of people like him.

He unfastened himself,
Trotted out of the camp,
Vanished into the night.

At dawn he was at a village
Begging to be taken into the tribe
'A tribeman, hunter, chief's servant and messenger.'

Swift as an antelope was he
Outstripping runners
Chased by dogs.
"Ka modimo" they swore.
"He is a man of the cloud.
Ompone ke tswa kae?"
A legendary tale: where have you seen me?
"I have seen you from the cloud."
Khoi-khoi-son-of-Man.

I knew since yesterday
That he was my grandfather
Khoikhoi-son-of-man.

4. Paton has always championed issues of racial integration and reconciliation. Basing your discussion on the "The Quarry," write a short essay on this topic.
